Research Support and Project Planning: Lovejoy Library supports all students, faculty and staff with information needs, research for papers, special projects and classroom assignments. Individual student support is available during free blocks or before study hall. Online tools are available at the MyProctor group page for Lovejoy Library.

Information Literacy Instruction: Librarians provide information literacy instruction based on the American Association of School Librarians’ Standards for the 21st Century Learner. Delivery of instruction varies from full class meetings to one-on-one or small group support.

Lovejoy Collection: Lovejoy Library provides resources in print and electronic formats. Subscriptions to a variety of online databases supply news, reference and journal articles, primary source artifacts and multimedia to the Proctor community on-campus and abroad.

Reserves: Materials for projects and assignments may be placed on reserve for use in the library. Reserves are held at the circulation desk and must be signed out and remain on-site.

Circulation: Students, faculty and staff can borrow materials from the circulating collection for two weeks with possible renewal if no one is waiting for the item.

Interlibrary Loan: The Lovejoy Library participates in the New Hampshire Automated Information System, the statewide library cooperative. This allows the Proctor community to borrow materials from public and academic libraries throughout the state. Drop by or email the library for help locating resources and allow a week for delivery.

NoodleTools: This web-based, collaborative tool generates MLA & APA citations and helps organize project-related digital notecards and outlines. Citations from other sources may be imported to Noodle Tools and the sources and supporting material may be shared with instructors and librarians for review and feedback.

Group Study/Conference Rooms: Two conference rooms are available for group study in the library. Student groups wishing to use a conference room should sign up in advance.

Math First Aid: Three evenings per week, the peer-tutor driven Math First Aid is held in the Library. Students who would like support with math classes are encouraged to drop in.

Proctor Writing Lab: For help with essays, papers and other writing projects, students have access to drop in peer-tutoring as well as one-to-one instructor sessions by appointment. Contact the library for details.
