This past school year, 2014-2015, was a year of extraordinary change!

We started the year dedicating the Bell Family Middle School and ushering in a new era of middle school education for grades 5-8. The nearly 10 years of planning and preparation that preceded the dedication, made the transition nearly seamless and most enjoyable.

Throughout the year, the middle school faculty under Dr. Ed Dickinson in his final year before retirement, learned about and maximized educational opportunities in our new state-of-the-art middle school. We were thrilled to recruit Ed’s successor, Barry Davis, himself a career middle school educator, in whom Dr. Dickinson and the faculty have found the right person to carry forward our middle school program.

With the exodus of 5th grade from the Lower School to the Middle School, Lower School Director Gillian Goodman transformed the former 5th grade space into a multi-purpose room and Maker’s Space, bringing to life our vision of project-based learning as an important component of a GDS education. The excitement in the Lower School has attracted a large number of alumni who are following in their families’ footsteps and becoming GDS parents themselves.

The Upper School welcomed a record number of International students who broadened and stretched our culture in wonderful ways. Under the leadership of Upper School Director Dr. Susan Feibelman, our faculty also imagined how a mini-semester in the winter months might invigorate learning for 9th-12th grades. The announcement of a new Winter Term in 2015-16 has our students and faculty excited about exploring everything from Japanese wood-fired pottery to immigration in the Piedmont.

We surpassed our $7 million goal of our Generations Capital Campaign and completed a new Auxiliary Gymnasium that was constructed last year and ready for use in early March. This new athletic space, in addition to our new tennis courts, has greatly expanded our ability to meet the needs of our award-winning athletic program. We celebrated our complex of the three gymnasia by collectively naming them the Freddy Johnson Sports Center.

Last but not least, we watched the heart of our campus – our beautiful new quadrangle – grow greener, and take shape with lampposts, and banners that remind us daily of our motto - Friendship, Scholarship, and Sportmanship – and our core values of Community, Wisdom, and Respect. Members of the school community are already stamping their approval with commemorative bricks, trees and benches in the Quad. We look forward to being able to put it to full use next fall.

With so much change and transition, it is now time to pause and celebrate all we have accomplished together, and look forward to our 50th year in 2020 of being the community’s premier independent school.

This issue of the magazine is full of the many accomplishments of our students – especially the Class of 2015 - and the stories that define GDS.

Greensboro Day School develops the intellectual, ethical, and interpersonal foundations students need to become constructive contributors to the world. If you receive this magazine, it is likely that you are already a member of our school community, fully embrace our mission, and will feel the pride of these accomplishments. If you are just getting to know us, we hope you enjoy this magazine issue and we invite you to join our efforts to make a difference in children’s lives.

Congratulations to our graduates of the Class of 2015!

Here’s wishing everyone a safe and wonderful summer.

Head of School
Faculty and Students Honored for Outstanding Accomplishments

At the end of each school year, Greensboro Day School honors faculty and students whose achievements are considered extraordinary. To follow are the recipients of this year’s awards:

Founders’ Award

Annalise Graves ’15 was announced as this year’s Founders’ Award recipient for best exemplifying the characteristics of scholarship, sportsmanship, and leadership implicit in the founding of our school.

During her Upper School career, she has received many honors including the Kimberly Susan Bates ’84 Memorial Award and John F. Johnson Scholar Award, both in 2014, and induction into the Cum Laude Society. During her senior year, she received departmental awards in history/social sciences and French. In the arts, she has played both leading and supporting roles. Her devotion to playing the violin led her to serve as a mentor to new sixth grade orchestra students, helping them adjust to the demands of our middle school program.

In the classroom, she has taken on challenges that other students might shy away from. Driven by an intellectual curiosity, over the past four years, she has completed seven advanced, ten Advanced Placement courses, and a directed study in English. Teachers have high praise for her exemplary work ethic, and her unwavering ability to use constructive criticism to further her understanding of the material.

Maureen B. Gerhardt Award

Alyssa Altheimer ’15 was the recipient of the Maureen B. Gerhardt Award. This award is made in memory of Maureen Gerhardt, Greensboro Day School parent and trustee, and given to a member of the Upper School who best exemplifies the values of honor, personal integrity, responsible citizenship, and service to the community.

Alyssa is an excellent scholar, and a person who is aware of the world problems like human trafficking and human rights violations. She understands how politics and laws can interfere with social justice and equality. In the classroom, Alyssa is assertive but kind and respectful towards others’ opinions. Even when she does not agree with a rule, she tries to see the issue from other people’s perspective. This is a very rare quality in such a young person. Her dedication to our orchestra and the way she has represented GDS outside of our school in National events, makes her an outstanding team player.

Kimberly Susan Bates ’84 Memorial Award

Jack Cote ’16 is the recipient of the Kimberly Susan Bates ’84 Memorial Award. The Bates Award recipient is selected by the Upper School faculty for his or her joy of learning -- in our school and surrounding community -- and for the way he or she demonstrates the school’s values of honor, leadership, friendship, sportsmanship, and scholarship.
Faculty and Students Honored for Outstanding Accomplishments

According to his teachers, Jack is a phenomenal student and leader. He is a member to the Ambassador Club, National Honor Society and Student Council. He also founded the GDS Junior State of America chapter. Jack is always willing to lend a helping hand all the while maintaining excellent grades. He is dedicated, earnest and kind.

The John F. Johnson Scholar - Athlete Award
Adam Schner ‘16 was named the Johnson-Scholar Athlete. The John F. Johnson Scholar-Athlete Award is given to a junior who exemplifies the best combination of values of outstanding sportsmanship while participating in the Greensboro Day School sports program and exemplary scholarship in his or her class work. The award is made in honor of the late John F. Johnson’s dedication to young people and their healthy intellectual and athletic development.

Schner is an outstanding student-athlete that has the great ability to lead his peers on and off the playing field. His best attributes are his compassion for others and his passion for whatever sport he is participating in. Adam's ability to coach and direct his teammates is one of the main reason the Bengal boys lacrosse team set school records in the 2015 season.

He led the best scoring defense in school history with his constant communication and his physical play.

His leadership is always on display and especially in the defining moments of a critical contest. It is these characteristics that earned him a leadership role as one of the team captains. Adam has been selected to the PACIS All-Conference Lacrosse team every year since 8th grade.

Dr. Judith R. Thompson Award
Wendy Lavine ’85 is the recipient of the Dr. Judith R. Thompson Award. The Dr. Judith R. Thompson Award recognizes a student, group of students, parent, volunteer, faculty or staff member who has enhanced human relations within the Greensboro Day School community. The recipient of this award has demonstrated a strong passion and commitment to ensuring that GDS is and always will be a welcoming community that understands, respects, and celebrates differences. Through thoughtful planning and deliberate actions, this recipient has made a direct impact on diversity and education at GDS. Dr. Thompson was a parent at GDS, a professor at Bennett College, a very good friend and supporter here. She died much too young in 1998.

Lavine has made a tremendous difference at GDS for more than 15 years. She has served both the GDS, and greater Greensboro communities, in very important ways.

As a 1985 graduate of GDS, Lavine was known for a deep sense of caring even in those early days of our school. Over the last three years she has served as our GDS Diversity Coordinator. As a club advisor, she has worked with Upper School students to promote a climate of inclusivity and cultural competence. Annually, she has promoted participation in the NAIS People of Color Conference and Student Diversity Leadership Conference.
Most recently she helped Upper School students connect with fifth graders in a series of conversations that explore the effect that biased behaviors can have on our school community.

The Lenwood Edwards Endowment Award
The Lenwood Edwards Endowment Award is given to two Upper School students of diverse background whose personal achievement and values exemplify the school motto of Friendship, Scholarship, and Sportsmanship. The award is made in honor of Lenwood Edwards, the school’s first director of athletics.

AJ Spruill ‘16
AJ is a young man of very high character. As a member of the GDS Boys Soccer Program, AJ has shown a tremendous work ethic and always has the good of the team in mind. He is dedicated, sincere, and enthusiastic; he consistently strives to learn more.

James Millner ‘16
James is a very diligent and hardworking student-athlete. He has played varsity basketball for three years and has been a member of the track team for two years. James is also a member of the National Honor Society. One of James’s greatest strengths is that he is a natural leader who works hard in the world of athletics as well as in the classroom, all the while earning the respect of both his peers and his teachers.

Carla D. Dowler Tradition of Caring Award
Kindergarten Teacher Lori Rogers was named the Carla D. Dowler Tradition of Caring award recipient. One of her nominations stated, “This person embodies the word ‘professional.’ She is such a hard worker and an outstanding communicator. Weekly newsletters are so timely and informative. She does a particularly good job of striking a balance between being enthusiastic and positive about my child’s strengths but not sugarcoating his challenges. She strikes a great balance for the kids between working hard at academics and having fun.”

The award was established to honor a Lower School parent, teacher, or any other staff member who touches Lower School students’ lives and fits the following criteria: values kindness and sensitivity to others; reflects a determination to succeed; exemplifies a love for learning; and embodies an abiding respect for teaching and being with children.

2015 James P. Hendrix, Jr. Excellence in Teaching Award
Tim Martin, 8th grade science teacher, was honored as the 2015 James P. Hendrix, Jr. Excellence in Teaching Award during Commencement on June 5. Martin has been a member of the GDS faculty for more than 15 years. He is known for being a teacher who presents challenging material and demands a great deal from his students but is always willing to give extra help at all times throughout the day. His passions include geology, astronomy, and earth science. Martin was instrumental in the design of the Bell Family Middle School.

This award was established and named in 1986 for former Headmaster Jim Hendrix to honor annually one teacher who exemplifies the highest standards of teaching and professionalism.

A representative group from the Greensboro Day School Drama Club consisting of 18 Upper School students and 2 faculty members traveled to New York City February 13-17, 2015. They sang in the Parade chorus of 200 singers from around the country at Avery Fisher Hall at Lincoln Center.

19 GDS Middle School students were accompanied by faculty members to Carnegie Hall in New York City on May 23, 2015. These students were selected to be part of an honor choir performing at Carnegie Hall, led by Greensboro native, Tom Shelton.
A Greensboro Day School family has made a significant gift to the Drama/Theatre Department that will be used to fund technology and equipment.

The studio theatre will be upfitted with a state-of-the-art LED lighting system and robotic light fixtures that students can focus on their own to learn the craft of stage lighting. There is also funding for the dimmer console and digital lighting control box with hundreds of feet of DMX cables.

Director of Performing Arts Ruthie Tutterow is thrilled with the gift which will make the studio theatre “show-ready,” but also benefit larger productions in the Sloan Theatre. “These items have been on our Wish List for many years and we are so grateful to our generous donors for the funding. Our students – and their audiences – will benefit directly.”

One large item this gift will provide is a hydraulic scissor-lift that will allow Technical Director Dana Lowell to rig lights and cables more efficiently and safely in both the Bell Family Studio Theatre and the Linda Sloan Theatre.

In a coincidence of good timing, Dana Lowell recently received a TEEF grant to attend a Vectorworks CAS Lighting and Scenery Design workshop this summer. He is excited to be able to offer more extensive lighting training with the lighting lab and equipment to Stagecraft students. Volunteer technicians on productions will also benefit from Dana’s training, coupled with the new equipment.

“We are grateful for the generous support Greensboro Day School families provide for our school,” said Head of School Mark Hale. “This gift will make our already exceptional drama program, even brighter and more colorful!”

Jeff Regester’s physics classes met on the lacrosse field where they could study the helicopter that landed there for the day. As a bonus, Lower School students were invited, not only to see it, but to even sit in the cockpit and wear the headset! The helicopter was provided, and piloted, by our own alumnus and parent Chris Caffey ’84.

KATHY DAVIS
Mrs. Davis will attend the Anja S. Greer Conference on Secondary School Mathematics, Science and Technology at Philips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire. She will study two topics: Using Mathematics to Analyze Social Justice and Game Theory.

This new knowledge will be used to “design an invigorating course for the new Upper School Winter Term that will offer another level of thinking to our students’ curriculum plan.”

MARA MONTANA
Mrs. Montana will attend the Writer’s Workshop at Exeter, at Philips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire.

She will learn to use tools and techniques employed by professional writers and seasoned writing teachers. She will learn the artistic techniques and strategies that are necessary in creative writing and will share them with students in the Imaginative Composition course that she has developed.

PETER WILLIAMS
Mr. Williams will travel to the UK in the summer of 2015 in preparation for a proposed Upper School Winter Term Course and possible trip for Latin and English students.

He will research educational opportunities for students, such as seeing the neo-classical architecture in London and possibly visiting the workshop of Neil Burridge, who operates a world-renowned forge to create accurate replicas of artifacts used by cultures in the bronze age.
The Philanthropy Council met multiple times this year to review, discuss, and approve the grants sent in by Greensboro Day School students. The Philanthropy Council believes in funding grants that focus on the root cause of an issue rather than the effect of it. The Council encourages grants that benefit both the GDS community and communities outside of our school. Each grant application was evaluated and either approved or declined by the council members. We appreciate the support from the GDS Parent Association and the staff members that have helped guide us to successfully approve eight grants this year.

Two grants were awarded to the Blood Drive Committee, one for each of the two drives, for a total of $450. These funds bought snacks for blood donors. We awarded $180 to Michael Jacobson ‘16 and the Drama Club to fund their “Ghoul-O-Gram” project. This project raised money for Backpack Beginnings and helped spread Halloween festivity at GDS. The Council awarded $250 to Anisha Sharma ‘16 for the Glen Haven Refugee Center, allowing Anisha to buy resources to continue conducting art camps at the Center. The Council awarded $250.12 to Sabrina Greer ‘15 and the Spanish Club to buy material to make blankets. These blankets, made by GDS students, were then given to the Greensboro Urban Ministry. The Philanthropy Council gave $456 to Christopher Fenger ‘17 and the Sophomore Music Service Outreach to purchase music stands with lighting. This allowed the orchestra to perform at venues such as retirement facilities and schools. Finally, the Council funded two middle school grants this year. The first, awarded to 7th graders Kate Hodgin and Evy Hochstein, went towards buying the supplies for our sister school in Nicaragua and became a project that many students in the middle school became excited about. The Council also awarded $250 to 5th graders Braden Somerville, Wesley Penfield, Garland Bell, Joshua Plaskett, Kenan Calfo, Faith McDonald, and Kaitlyn McCoy to buy two goats and seven trees for the Peacehaven Farm, forging a new connection for GDS that will continue to grow in the years to come.
Martin Trains Educators

GDS Earth Science teacher Tim Martin has been instrumental in planning and presenting several education workshops that have been jointly sponsored by the North Carolina Geological Survey, NC Division of Emergency Management, and NCDENR.

K-12 and informal educators from across the state of North Carolina learned about:
- History of North Carolina earthquakes
- How to prepare for an earthquake emergency
- New Earth Science curriculum correlated to Essential Standards
- Hands-on activities to bring back to classrooms

Many of the lessons and activities presented at this workshop are part of the standard GDS Earth Science curriculum each year. Workshops were presented in Asheville, Charlotte and Winston-Salem throughout the month of September.

Mark Drusdow, US High School History teacher received a section of the World Trade Center south tower to enhance his curriculum. This donation to the school was graciously made by D.H. Griffin.

Middle School students presented a check for $1,024.15 to the Jim (Catfish) Hunter Chapter of ALS. Funds were raised during the annual pumpkin decorating service learning project.

Senior Addie Anderson won the Bill Lee Memorial Scholarship presented by the Greensboro Sports Commission.

Athletic Director and Boys’ Basketball Coach Freddy Johnson achieved his 900th win at GDS. True to form with Freddy, he downplayed the achievement, telling the television news reporters that this was his players’ win and not his own. In 2012, Freddy surpassed 812 wins as a high school coach, making him the winningest boys’ basketball coach in North Carolina.

7th grader Rett Grewal won the GDS Geography Bee as part of Megan Judy’s culture studies class. Rett is now scheduled to take a written exam from National Geographic in order to determine his qualification for a regional bee in North Carolina.

Samantha Kolls ’15 was honored for her exemplary volunteer service with a President’s Volunteer Service Award. The award recognizes Americans of all ages who have volunteered significant amounts of time in their communities. Congratulations!

Anisha Sharma ’16 represented Greensboro Day at the Guilford County English Speaking Union Shakespeare Recitation Competition at UNCG on Saturday, March 7. As our school contest winner, Anisha won $50. She competed with a monologue from The Tempest and Sonnet 29. Anisha placed third in a very impressive competition and won an additional $200.
The NC Science Olympiad regional competition was held Saturday, March 21, 2015, on the campus of UNCG. There were 20 teams (varsity and junior varsity) from 12 high schools competing in the Greensboro region. The first place varsity winners (for GDS) advanced to the state competition in April on the campus of North Carolina State University in Raleigh, NC.

Lower School students had a chance to learn about reptiles from CCSB Reptile Rescue through Mrs. Cook’s Science Class.
The varsity boys golf team had a year of impressive growth and development. The Bengals finished the 2015 season with an overall record of 13-21 in 10 matches. The golf team had five players post their competitive varsity golf career best rounds. With a solid group of players returning with match experience, the 2016 season looks promising! The team will miss graduating seniors, Alec Bijou, Alex Kroeger, and Mitch Phipps. Ian McIvor was named to PACIS All-Conference team.

The varsity boys tennis team had a good season despite losing many seniors last year including 5 out of 6 in the starting roster. The team finished with an overall record of 11-6 placing 2nd place in the conference, but still making it to the state tournament. However, the Bengals lost 8 - 1 to North Raleigh Christian in the first round of the state tournament. The team is just losing one senior this year with Connor Dean graduating, but the team has great potential with returning young players such as Connor Haggarty, Henry Reich, Cameron Sherrill, and more.

The girls lacrosse team ended their 2015 season as PACIS conference champions with a 5-6 record in the regular season. They made it to states after a hard fought win over Asheville, their greatest rival of the year. Although they lost to Charlotte Country Day School in the first round of the state tournament, the season was still a great success. This season’s record was the best in eight years and seven players earned all-conference recognition. The team is graduating five talented senior leaders who will be greatly missed. With 18 returning players, the lacrosse girls’ have a promising future.

The varsity baseball team had a great season with a talented young roster with only 2 seniors, and finished the season with a 7-8 record. The Bengals will return 13 players from this year’s team and look forward to the 2016 season. The 2015 team went undefeated outside the PACIS conference beating North Raleigh, Covenant Day, Ravenscroft, and Durham Academy. Dillon Bowman ’16 had a great year offensively leading the team in home runs and defensively on the mound also earning all-conference honors in the toughest league in the state.

The boys lacrosse team had its most successful season since the program started 18 years ago, recording 14 wins and making it to the quarterfinal round of the NCISAA Playoffs. The first round playoff win was the first in program history. The Bengals also won its first outright PACIS championship and the second annual FACEOFF against ALS game vs. Page High School in front of 1,200 fans that raised over $13,000 for the Duke University ALS Research Clinic.

The boys lacrosse team participated in the Brine King of Spring HS Lacrosse Tournament where they played Archbishop Spalding from Severn, MD a member of the Nation’s premier HS lacrosse conference (MIAA/A). They also participated in the Cape Fear Lacrosse Tournament in Wilmington, NC where they played Kiski Prep Academy, a premier lacrosse program from the outskirts of Pittsburg, PA.

The Bengal lacrosse team will lose one player to graduation and return their core group in 2016. The future of the program is extremely promising as the 2015 Middle School team won their first TRIAD MS lacrosse championship. The Varsity team will inherit eight rising freshmen from their talented MS team in 2016 which bodes well for the program.

Both boys and girls track teams had successful seasons this year. The girls finished 3rd at the conference meet and the boys finished 4th. The girls team ended the season with a top 10 finish at the state track meet. The girls were led by Kaitlyn Lingard and Tamera Thorpe, who both broke track school records during the season. Lingard was the PACIS Conference Athlete of the year and also earned All-State honors. The boys’ were led by Marquelle McIntyre and Beau Burns, who both qualified for multiple events at the state meet and represented GDS well. Even with the loss of our seniors, the track team looks to continue its strong tradition next season.

The girls varsity soccer team finished the season with a 10-7-2 record. The group worked hard all season and defeated High Point Christian in double overtime in its final regular season game to advance into the NCISAA State Play-offs for the 25th consecutive year. The Bengals upset number six seed Metrolina Day in an exciting first round game before losing to third rank Cary Academy in the quarterfinals of the State play-offs. The 8th rank Bengals were lead this season by All-State goalkeeper Lily Brown who recorded 7 shut-outs and All-Region Rachel Pfenning who lead the team in scoring with 9 goals and 7 assists. Three of the Lady Bengals will continue to play in college next season, Lily Brown - UNC Wilmington, Carleigh Roach - Greensboro College, and Cassidy Burroughs - Milliken University.

Twenty-first century learners have the world at their fingertips. However, they too often have little understanding about the earth beneath their feet, or the communities in their own backyards.

At Greensboro Day School, the life science curriculum purposefully presents students with opportunities to apply biological concepts to true natural environments.

One important way we do this is our 20-year-old gardening program. At GDS, we believe that gardening provides an excellent experience in life science.

“Gardening provides balance to a high-powered learning experience such as technology,” says Middle School Director Ed Dickinson. “GDS is credited with being a local technology pioneer with our laptop program, so it is easy to forget that before that, we were pioneers with our garden program. We think it is important to balance the intense experience of technology with the outdoor community-building experience.”

In 1994, GDS science teacher Val Vickers acted on research suggesting that students who are challenged with focusing – ADD, ADHD – have a high success in engaging through the authentic experience of outdoor education. Middle school educators know that all students this age – growing rapidly physically, socially and emotionally – can benefit from this outdoor educational experience in addition to classroom learning.

With encouragement from Dr. Dickinson, Dr. Vickers sought advice from Charlie Headington, a UNCG professor and a pioneer in local permaculture gardening. And so, with the help of parent volunteers, the first Permaculture Garden at GDS was established to the west of the old (now demolished) Middle School. Permaculture gardening is defined as combining the best of wildlife gardening, edible landscaping, and native-plant cultivation into one low-maintenance, self-contained and productive ecosystem.

Parent volunteers Cheryl Lingenfelter, Becky Hollowell, Val Vickers and other faculty, and the 7th grade began planting. Our enthusiastic school community embraced the garden and families brought beautiful rocks and other features from their travels, a fish pond was established, and a large variety of plants were cultivated and thrived in the garden. Edible landscaping included blueberries, pears, persimmons, and more.

A garden shed and tools were acquired. The garden was soon identified as a great opportunity for scout projects.

“True gardening is hard to maintain, but ours flourished through volunteerism,” beams Dr. Dickinson. “The whole school community volunteered to help in our garden.”
When Dr. Vickers retired in 2007, incoming 7th grade science teacher, Clarissa Marshall inherited the original middle school garden when she arrived at GDS.

Then, several years ago, under the direction of Lower School Science Teacher Rose Marie Cook, the lower grades took over the former backyard of the North Cottage and established a Lower School Community Garden there, as well.

GDS’ two gardens each have their own designs and artfully reflect the age groups of the students who tend and learn from them. Even as they provide wonderful community-building opportunities, the science teachers agree they require time and attention from students, teachers, volunteers and staff. Both science teachers give a large amount of credit to the GDS Facilities Staff, Director Brano Milicevic, Ron Stanfield and Todd Wrenn. “These guys have done a lot of the ‘heavy lifting’ for us” says Mrs. Cook.

Agrees Mrs. Marshall, “They are my favorite people in the world; always willing to stop what they are doing and to help me think through a project or problem.”

With the GDS garden program firmly “rooted” in 2009, as early visioning took place for the planned new front entrance on Lake Brandt Road, new middle school,

GEORGE ANDREVE

Veteran GDS math teacher Kathy Davis and her husband Robert had a very special relationship with their longtime next door neighbor George Andreve. In fact, he considered them family.

Mr. Andreve did not know GDS very well, except through Kathy and Robert. A former math teacher, George enjoyed talking with Kathy about lesson plans and ways to help students discover the joy of numbers. In addition to math, though, he loved gardening.

The Andreves, George and his mother Ruth, could be considered ahead of their time in their love of edible gardens and plant-based homeopathic health remedies. He spent many hours not only in the act of gardening, but reading about, learning about, and spreading his love of gardening. George Andreve lived simply. He loved his First Moravian Church, his gardens, and his friends.

When he passed away suddenly in 2007, George Andreve, through his estate plan, established a foundation with a mission to support the preservation of land and wildlife. This included the establishment and maintenance of teaching gardens for young people. He made his trusted friends, Kathy and Robert Davis, the trustees of his foundation.

Kathy Davis was serving GDS at the time as Alumni Director in the advancement office which was gearing up for the Generations Campaign to build a new front entrance, relocate tennis courts, a new middle school for grades 5-8, and a central quadrangle.

“She came to my office late one afternoon and told me that George Andreve would have wanted to make sure we have a teaching garden as part of the new middle school,” said Anne Hurd, Director of Advancement.

“We were also looking for major leadership gifts to move forward the campaign. Kathy and Robert Davis accomplished both with a major gift from the Andreve Foundation that established the George Andreve Teaching Garden and helped us achieve a major milestone in the early phase of the Generations Campaign,” Hurd adds.

Other prospective donors - still reluctant to commit as the recession wore on (and waiting to see whether others were going to support the campaign) followed their lead and joined in supporting the campaign. “It was definitely an aspirational gift that leveraged others,” Hurd says.

Hurd adds that math students lured Mrs. Davis back to the classroom fulltime in 2012, but Mrs. Davis remains committed to the George Andreve Teaching Garden and is very involved in its progress.
and central quadrangle, one feature that had to be included was evident: the new middle school must have a teaching garden.

Planning the Andreve Teaching Garden

With a love of life science, middle school students, and gardening, plus good organizational skills, Mrs. Marshall embraced planning the new Andreve Garden with boundless energy.

She was also determined to salvage and reuse the best of the first garden.

As construction began on the new middle school building in 2012, she “marshalled” volunteers to dig up and preserve precious plantings for relocation when the new garden was ready to receive them. A large contingent of students and their families on Bengal Paws for Service day dug, hauled, packaged, and secured, not only the plants, but the rocks and other hardscape features, fences, tools and other items collected over the years for the first garden.

At the same time, with a little more help from the Andreve Foundation and upon recommendation from Mrs. Marshall, Bountiful Backyards – a garden design firm from Durham – was engaged to work with a GDS team to plan our new garden’s infrastructure and location of plantings.

Appropriately for GDS, Bountiful Backyard’s motto is: Landscapes You Can Eat. They describe themselves as “committed to growing people’s ability to produce beautiful, regenerative and abundant edible landscapes.” This group, joined by a small group from GDS, comprised what we like to think of as George Andreve’s dream team.

The dream team envisioned an edible teaching garden and natural play area with fruit trees and berry bushes (some new, some transplanted from the old garden), beneficial perennials such as goldenrod, sorrel and milkweed (think Monarch butterflies), a tea garden, culinary herbs, and native shrubs and trees for birds.

Cisterns to store water runoff from the Bell Family Middle School roof to water the garden were included in the building’s construction. There are “keyhole” teaching beds, with a place for the instructor in the middle to be surrounded by students. There is a place for compost, the garden shed, and an arbor and gate. Though not yet in place, plans call for a fishpond and conceptual ideas for the east side suggest a large natural play area with a grassy hill and a blackberry tunnel.

A fruit tree border on the southwest side will minimize the potential for lacrosse balls to make it all the way up to the garden from the field below.

Kirby South Gate: a connector between the gardens

Another gift to the Generations Campaign helped to fund the building and gardens. The South Gate, connection between gardens (the Andreve Teaching Garden and the central courtyard) was named in memory of Barbara Carlin Kirby, who passed away in May 2013. The F.M. Kirby Foundation made a major gift to the Generations Campaign in her honor.

Barbara was the mother of Leigh Carlin Kirby ’04 and wife of Fred Morgan Kirby III, who is a past GDS trustee. She was a graduate of California State Polytechnic University with a degree in horticulture who generously shared her love of gardening – and cooking – with her GDS community. She was a very active parent volunteer.

Her friend Sheri Evans remembers her as a woman of grace, charm and refinement who lit up every room she entered with a mirthful and self-deprecating sense of humor, a warm smile and a generous spirit.

Therefore, it is very fitting, that Barbara is remembered in connection with our outdoor learning, gardening and gathering spaces.

“Teaching children about the natural world should be seen as one of the most important events in their lives.”

-Thomas Berry, The Dream of the Earth
While much effort has gone into planning the horticulture, infrastructure and hardscape, as much or more time and thought has gone into envisioning the curriculum that is the basis for the learning that will take place there.

The life science curriculum at Greensboro Day School strives to present students with opportunities to apply biological concepts to true natural environments and the Andreve garden is an integral part of that mission.

As a part of the life science curriculum, students:

- make observations which relate to the characteristics and necessities of living things
- practice taxonomy by identifying species in the garden
- take pride in growing edible crops
- observe the plant life cycle
- learn good land management practices
- approach organic chemistry by learning soil science and macronutrient needs of plants
- collect and analyze data
- solve authentic problems
- create a meaningful relationship with the natural world

The second mission of the George Andreve Teaching Garden is to provide the GDS community with a place to commune with, observe and play in nature. While the teaching garden remains close to the curriculum, it is also a place for any person on campus to enjoy.

“Children are born naturalists. They explore the world with all of their senses, experiment in the environment, and communicate their discoveries to those around them.”

- The Audubon Nature Preschool

Finally, it is the hope that as the garden becomes established, it will also function as a servant garden from which fresh produce donations will be made to local food pantries and soup kitchens.

Dr. Ed Dickinson has emphasized the importance of outdoor education throughout his career, and since he was hired in 1981 to establish GDS’ middle school. As he retires this spring, he is pleased with the progress made on the George Andreve Teaching Garden and the GDS commitment to outdoor education.

“Knowledge gained by gardening is not easy to test,” says Dr. D., “however, the joy and collaboration that gardening provides is obviously a wonderful teaching tool.

Resources that guide our philosophy: Last Child in the Woods by Richard Louv (Yale), Steven Kelert
It all began in February 2013, when Upper School faculty used a professional development day to describe the teaching and learning environment they wanted to create by the year 2020, when Greensboro Day School will celebrate its 50th anniversary. Written as headlines that might appear in The News and Record, we wanted to ensure that...

Upper School curriculum, programs, and instructional practices promote cultural competence and global citizenship

Upper School curricula fosters interdisciplinary learning; and actively promotes entrepreneurial skills and critical literacy

The principles of service learning inform the Upper School’s approach to developing learning experiences for every student

The habits of effective leadership is integrated into our curricular and extra-curricular programs

The characteristics of an inclusive school culture are a common denominator that informs our instructional practices and program development throughout the Upper School

"Our children no longer learn how to read the great book of Nature from their own direct experience, or how to interact creatively with the seasonal transformations of the planet. They seldom learn where their water comes from or where it goes. We no longer coordinate our human celebration with the great liturgy of the heavens."

- Wendell Berry
These ambitious headlines led to the creation of the 2014 GDS Think Tank. This week long, creative endeavor brought together Upper School teachers from across the disciplines in order to explore innovative instructional practices that could further our ability to provide learning opportunities that foster the intellectual, ethical, and interpersonal foundations students need to become constructive contributors to the world.

Seeds that were sown last summer and nurtured over the past school year are now being readied to introduce this fall. Our first initiative is the Upper School Winter Term, which will take place January 5-15, 2016, and was previewed for parents last spring. Winter Term is a completely new and exciting take on progressive education for GDS. By moving the time previously allocated for an activities week at the end of the year to early January, we have been able to create a program that provides students with nine instructional days during which they can be engaged in a diverse array of intellectually engaging learning experiences.

When asked to plan a course they had always wanted to teach, Upper School teachers rose to the occasion. Their course proposals reflect the breadth and depth of faculty interests and expertise. In addition to full-time GDS Upper School teachers, several guest teachers will also be offering Winter Term courses. To whet your appetite, here's a sampling of what our students have to look forward to in January.

AN INTERDISCIPLINARY COURSE entitled Apocalyptic Realities or “It’s the End of the World as We Know It” (R.E.M.), which explores apocalyptic stories found in various literatures and the scientific explanations for these catastrophic events.

A STUDIO ART COURSE entitled Traditional Japanese Wood-Firing, which will explore the traditional wood-firing process with an emphasis on the Six Kilns of Japan. Students will produce forms related to the process of wood-firing and to participate in the preparation, loading, firing and exhibition of completed forms.

A LANGUAGE COURSE entitled Un estudio en el campo—Triad inmersión experiencia. This field study emerges students into an in-depth student of the life of an immigrant in the Piedmont Triad, with a specific focus on the culture and politics of Siler City’s Latino community.

A MATH COURSE entitled So you want to model, designed for the student who enjoys “playing” with math, is willing to take a risk, and is looking for a way to apply the concepts learned in their math classes to real world settings.

A CLASSICAL LITERATURE COURSE entitled Britain: Legend and Literature, which looks at English language and literature as a synthesis of many peoples and cultures, from native Celts and Picts to Roman, Saxon, and Norman invaders. Students enrolled in this course will take an exploratory trip to the UK during spring break 2016.

The complete Winter Term catalogue will be available in mid-September and students in grades 9-12 will register for courses before the end of the first quarter (September 15 and October 16). Choosing from more than 25 different classes, students may enroll in one five-hour course or two 2.5 hour courses, all of which meet daily. By participating in these winter term courses our students will be able to explore their passions, discover new interests, increase their level of civic engagement, and most importantly feed their imaginations.

We are confident that Winter Term courses will also be an attractive addition to every student’s GDS transcript. For each of our learners, Winter Term courses offer colleges even greater understanding of his/her areas of interests and ability to be successful in an authentic, multifaceted learning environment.

So how can you become involved?

Many of our Winter Term courses are built around school-community partnerships. If you or your organization is interested in exploring ways to connect with the course work being developed by Upper School teachers, please contact Upper School Director, Susan Feibelman at susanfeibelman@greensboro.org; we are always excited to talk about Winter Term and welcome conversation.

EVERYBODY PLAYS, EVERYBODY WINS! For the past 17 years, this has been the theme for our annual Bengal Games. On Friday, March 20, all Bengals (K-12) participated in an afternoon of friendly competition to earn money for local charities. The Bitty Bengals and Junior Kindergartners participate by looking for the most spirited teams and awarding extra points for spirit.

Students participated in exciting activities, including trivia competitions, obstacle courses, egg drops and other active programs.

The RED TEAM $992 for Triad Health Project
The GREEN TEAM $986 for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.
The BLUE TEAM $992 for Greensboro Urban Ministry
The YELLOW TEAM $971 for the United Way of Greater Greensboro
The BLACK TEAM $982 for Hospice of Alamance County.

We couldn’t translate our points into dollars without the support of our sponsors: Lake Jeanette Orthodontics & Pediatric Dentistry, The PC and MacHelp Centers, Southeastern Orthopedics, Murphy Wainer Division, the Richardson Corporation, and Fairystone Fabrics Incorporated. Thank you!

For the first time in the history of Bengal Games, there was a tie! The red and blue teams tied for first place with 992 points each, raising $992 for their charities. A total of $4,923 was donated back into the community through this event.

Grandparents’ and Special Friends Day

April 24, 2015
The 8th Annual Bengal Dash was held April 25, 2015 in conjunction with Greensboro Day School’s Alumni Weekend. The purpose of the Bengal Dash is to bring awareness of fitness and health in a family-friendly way! All proceeds raised go directly to Greensboro Day School service learning projects, like BackPack Beginnings. Support from GDS families and the community through sponsorships, volunteers and event day promotions was fantastic! Parisi Speed School began the day’s events with warm ups for all runners with Trek Bicycle offering onsite bike and helmet safety checks. Bengal Town was alive with exciting games, face painting, and activities for the children. Following the races, Dancing Dogs Yoga hosted a Cool Down Yoga session for all participants.

There were 456 registered participants across the three events that included a kid’s 6 and under half-track dash, 1 Mile Fun Run and 5k USATF certified course. Medals were given for participation to children 12 and under. In addition the overall male and female winners of the 1 Mile Fun Run and 5k received medals and prizes along with the 5k male and female age group winners.

This marked the third year that the Bengal Dash 5k was a featured race in the Greensboro Race series. Net proceeds of the event were more than $10,000 and will directly support service learning projects at Greensboro Day School.

Meet Barry Davis
Middle School Director

Tell us a little about yourself – where were you before Greensboro Day School?
Before Greensboro Day School I was the Middle School Director at Brooklyn Friends School in Brooklyn, NY.

Why do you believe in independent schools?
I believe in independent schools because they give people an opportunity to be authentic. They provide an environment that is safe for students and staff to take risks, to learn from mistakes, and to grow into caring, empathetic individuals.

What is your favorite school memory? As a student, and as a teacher or administrator?
As a student, my favorite memory is of my fifth grade teacher, Mrs. Stewart. She was the first teacher who really cared about me as a person. While she was quite strict, there was never any question about her love for me and my classmates.

As an administrator, my favorite memories happen on a daily basis. When you get to see students, faculty, and parents arrive with smiles on their faces; it is very rewarding and contagious. It is also a great feeling when someone says thank you for making their day better.

Do you have a ritual or routine to start of your day?
My day always begins walking my dog Wrigley. He’s a great listener and is happy to see me each morning. I like to arrive early to school so I can listen to music in the office, and set the tone for the day. The mood of the morning will determine the type of music and the volume.

Tell us about your family, hobbies, and a good book you’ve recently read:
My family consists of my wife Karen and two sons; Alex who is a senior at Rhode Island School of Design, and Jordan who is a senior at UNC Greensboro. My hobbies include basketball (playing some, but not as much as in my younger days), eating (I am an aspiring foodie), and I love reading poetry, quotes, and Twitter. While not the latest book I’ve read, “Things Fall Apart” by Chinua Achebe is one that I enjoy. The most recent book was “Citizen, An American Lyric,” by Claudia Rankine.

As a newcomer to NC, the burning questions that everyone wants to ask.

Beach or Mountains? Beach
Cheerwine or Pepsi? Cheerwine
Biscuitville or Bojangles? Bojangles, (haven’t had Biscuitville yet)
Duke or Carolina? Carolina
Eastern or Western BBQ? This is a toss-up. Sounds like a great reason to have a taste test, any takers?

So what does the Parents’ Association actually DO?

The Parents’ Association saw a few changes this year. For the first time ever, there were two co-presidents. We designated responsibility for each endeavor, we worked together as much as possible and it went very smoothly. We created the PA Corner and Paws for Applause in PawPrints, which included our weekly report about the activities of the Parents’ Association and an opportunity to thank people for volunteering or supporting the PA in other ways.

The fall at GDS saw a lot of activity from the members of the PA. Our grade parents started working right away to delegate responsibility for class parties and teacher assistance throughout the year. Our Innisbrook Wrap sale started a little later this year to give families a chance to get settled into the new school year, and it was once again successful, raising close to $19,000. Our Special Projects, which include the education initiatives offered by Harris Teeter, Target and Box Tops, raised $5,200 this year. Thank you to everyone who linked their cards again and sent in box tops ... it adds up quickly!

The Fall Festival was held in October and was more reminiscent of Green and Gold Day for those of you that have been around for a while. Our committee wanted to give students the opportunity to experience good old fashion fun without all the bells and whistles of a large carnival. It was great to see all the younger kids enjoying the petting zoo, games, pumpkin painting, and food. It takes a great number of hours to plan and execute such an event and it was more manageable this year.

Our wonderful Hospitality Committee planned all of our parent socials, which took place at Natty Greene’s this year. It is always nice to have the opportunity to informally connect with other GDS parents. The Hospitality Committee also worked hard all year arranging breakfasts, snacks, and lunches once a month for the teachers in each division, in addition to the Teacher Appreciation Luncheon that took place in February, and the Faculty and Staff Appreciation Tea, which took place the last week of school. These are all to let our teachers know how grateful the Parents’ Association is for all that they do to make GDS such a great place to learn.

As the fall progressed, we sold cookbooks, met on campus for Paws for Service, our annual day of service to the community, and went through the allocations process, during which we were able to grant some “wishes” to the faculty and administration. This year, the PA purchased a new projector for the Sloan Theatre, scoreboards for the new auxiliary gym, rolling platforms for the Fine Arts Department, refurbished the break room in the Administration Building, and funded a Freedom from Chemical Dependency Program and part of the prom, in addition to other funding to Philanthropy and the Teacher Enrichment Endowment Fund (TEEF).

Bengal Network offered several fun programs this year. We held a tennis social in the fall, followed by a hiking trip to Hanging Rock State Park and an afternoon of yoga and nutrition in the early spring. Stay tuned to see what ideas we come up with for next year! Our Middle School Social Chairs planned some fun dances, creatively meeting the challenge of the addition of 5th graders to the middle school.

We have an Advisory Committee for each division, and they met monthly with their Division Head to discuss any issues or concerns that were brought to the attention of the group. The Advisory Committee is a great link between the parents and the administration and gives a forum to discuss issues that might otherwise go unaddressed.

Our PA Cares committee worked hard all year to show support to families who might be going through a rough time with illness, loss or some other challenging life experience.

In March, we announced the winners of our annual TEEF grants. We were able to award 13 grants this year, totaling more than $16,000, giving our teachers various continuing education opportunities that will be brought back into the classroom for the benefit of our students!

We brought back Hoops and Hoopla this year, and it was a great night to be a Bengal! Kids and parents alike had a “ball” watching the Court Jesters play our GDS team of teachers and alumni! We are not going to wait another 10 years to plan this fun event again! In addition to the FUN that we raised, we also raised FUNDS in the amount of $20,000, which will go into allocations for next year.

Our last big event for the year was Bengal Dash! It was a cold and rainy day in April, but that did not stop the crowds from showing up for our annual 5k, 1 mile, and Kids’ Dash. All proceeds from Bengal Dash go into Service Learning and Philanthropy, which supported Backpack Beginnings, a program that fills backpacks with food and gives them to at-risk children to take home over the weekend to make sure that they will have something to eat while away from school. We sponsored backpacks for 42 children from Brightwood Elementary School and our students helped pack the bags and deliver them each week.

It has been an honor to have the opportunity to serve as co-presidents of the Greensboro Day School Parents’ Association, and it was a pleasure to work with and get to know the teachers, administrators, and so many other GDS parents. We want to thank everyone who worked on all of the fantastic events and activities this year. We certainly could not have done any of this without all of our volunteers and without the support of our board and the administration. GDS is a better place because of all of you!

Best wishes for a great summer!

Leslye Tuck and Lori Aycock
2014-2015 PA Co-Presidents
Edwin Brown, class of ’09, fell in love with acting during his years at Greensboro Day School. In addition to serving as the president of the drama club during his senior year, Brown performed in several school productions including the lead role of the King in “The King and I,” “The Cherry Orchard” and “Les Misérables.” Brown also assisted with Lower School drama productions in addition to performing in the chorus and other school clubs and activities. He studied acting at Howard University, graduating with a BFA in 2013. While there, he was taught by the legendary Al Freeman, Jr., and shared the stage with Debbie Allen and Avery Brooks. After graduating from Howard University, he attended a two-month Shakespeare intensive at the British American Drama Academy in Oxford, England. He is continuing to study acting and dialect coaching in the master’s program at University of Missouri-Kansas City. He also recently received an acting credit on the Internet Movie Database (IMDB) for his work in a Smithsonian Channel remake.

I’ve heard different alumni say GDS isn’t the same school as they attended. My response: You are right, it’s not! There are new buildings, new teachers, and new curriculum. However, despite everything that is new, there is much that remains the same. GDS still provides the best education in the Triad area. It is still the place where you meet your best friends, and gain a solid foundation for your life after graduation.

While the facilities may change, it is still a place to feel at home. When alumni visit the school, they realize it still has that magical feel. Whether you visit for a tour, attend a play or sporting event, your class reunion, or come by for coffee with a former teacher, we hope you always feel right at home!

This was evident at Alumni Weekend in April when many alumni came back to campus and were amazed at the transformation of campus and the beautiful facilities. As many of you caught up with former teachers and other staff members, you remembered so many fond times that make GDS a special place.

This past winter, Thomas Roberts ’89 visited campus. As we walked through the halls and into the Alumni Gymnasium, I could sense a rush of nostalgia taking over Thomas. He grabbed a basketball and put up a shot in the gym where he spent numerous hours of his life. The stories he told brought a sense of joy and pride and made me realize how special GDS was to him and how thankful he was for his time at GDS. I can guarantee that when you come back to visit us, you’ll experience these same feelings and emotions with a deeper appreciate for the education GDS provided you and provides current students.

As I say so very often, GDS would not be where it is today without its Alumni. Each of you is an important part of the history, tradition, and culture at Greensboro Day School. Take ownership and pride in your relationship with the school as an alumnus/a. You are one of only 2,519 GDS graduates (welcome Class of ’15). In a world with billions of people, you are one of the few fortunate enough to have this opportunity!

Once A Bengal, Always A Bengal!

Endless/Boundless Opportunities
TRAVEL WHILE YOU’RE YOUNG. How many times do we hear this while growing up? Personally I heard it a lot, and in reality I took it about as seriously as the recommendation to stop and smell the roses; at least until my oldest brother really drove the point home. He told me that it was something he regretted not doing after college and that this would be the one time in my life when I wouldn’t be tied to anything, I could save my money, live cheaply, and that I would ultimately gain from those experiences. Fortunately this conversation took place early in my college career and it really stuck with me. Traveling became one of my primary goals and I had the time to work throughout college to make it happen. So after graduating from the University of Georgia I worked until I met my savings goal, quit my job, and hopped on a plane to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

That one-way ticket to Argentina was the extent of my itinerary - I had no plans beyond that, but after a few weeks I found that traveling was actually pretty tiring and difficult and I felt that I wasn’t exactly getting what I wanted out of it. This realization and the help of the internet led me to a volunteer between those projects. These opportunities led me into fields of work I never would have expected. I had the opportunity to help with a restaurant start-up in a national park in Chile. I learned all about organic farming while helping to start a large scale permaculture project to supply that same restaurant. I ended up on a farm in Ecuador that specialized in livestock production and learned about making sausage. Lastly and probably my favorite was an internship opportunity at a small bed and breakfast/farm outside of Mendoza, Argentina that ultimately changed the course of my entire trip. I found that it was a great way to see a more authentic and meaningful part of a place while learning something and helping people. Ultimately a 2 week volunteer agreement turned into a 6-week tenure at the bed and breakfast. Volunteering quickly became the bulk of my itinerary and the traveling was just a means to get travel while you’re with a fair trade accessories company based out of Ecuador known as Faire Collection. I was able to utilize my Fashion Merchandising degree and helped to design and source a line of jewelry that was ultimately sold in retailers throughout Ecuador. I had the opportunity to learn Spanish and work with indigenous communities and volunteers from all over the world. All of these experiences amounted to 8 months of my trip and make up the majority of my fondest memories. They taught me so many practical skills about small businesses, production, and sustainable living while giving me the chance to utilize a lot of what I learned in high school and college to help these people to improve their lives and businesses.

Between all of these amazing volunteer opportunities was where the travel, the A to B, came into play. This journey took me, by bus, from Patagonia all the way to Mexico City over the course of my year and a half journey. I made many of the classic stops along the way, but there was one thing that I really fell in love with; the Andes. Again, this discovery was made relatively early into my trip and instantly my Latin America bucket list was made up of different peaks and volcanoes scattered along the Andes. I was fortunate to be able to do several hikes in almost every country which was amazing. I found that my favorite way to see a place was from above, and the journey there was always the adventure. Trekking to these remote peaks almost always led me through small indigenous communities and farms where I’d receive onward directions from the locals and occasionally take part in their morning or afternoon commute herding cattle or sheep. These hikes led me all through Patagonia, to the summit of Ecuador’s 19,000 ft Cotopaxi, to campsites nestled under fire-breathing volcanoes, and so much further. I was able to learn a lot about myself and my surroundings, and found a love for being outside. So after just a glimpse into my time abroad my advice to you is to listen to the advice you’ve already been given: travel while you’re young. Take all those experiences you initially have at GDS (volunteering, the junior backpacking trip, your foreign language classes) and take them elsewhere. You’ll be amazed at what you discover and what you are able to accomplish.

As most college students are cramming for exams, writing term papers, pledging fraternities or sororities, and tailgating at football games, Matt Aronson, GDS Class of 2011, added one more thing to his college resume — becoming an entrepreneur.

Currently a senior at Georgetown University in Washington, DC, Aronson began developing the idea for his online clothing company, North by South Apparel, the summer after his sophomore year of college. His vision came to fruition this past fall when his online store went live and sold more than $2,000 in products primarily through social media and word-of-mouth marketing.

Aronson came up with the idea for North by South Apparel after noticing fashion trends on campus. He saw traditional brands like Vineyard Vines becoming popular among the college crowd for casual clothing, and also saw how excited students got when they got to dress up for formals in suits and ties or formal dresses. “I saw an opportunity to combine the two styles in a unique way that wasn’t currently available in the marketplace,” Aronson said.

North by South Apparel’s designs merge T-shirts with a chest pocket, custom fashioned from men’s neckties. The combinations of colors and patterns they offer range from traditional to the most current trends. The colors reflect and remind students of their school, organization, hometown or favorite team. Both men’s and ladies’ tops are available.

Shoppers can customize their shirt by first selecting the color and design of the necktie pocket and then choosing the color T-shirt. The result is a piece that reflects the customer’s personal style.

To undertake the task of creating a business while still in college, Aronson first enlisted the help of his family in assisting with the financial aspects and in starting the legal process to design a T-shirt using neckties as a pocket. “I took my first prototype T-shirt and showed it to friends at Georgetown University and then used word-of-mouth marketing to get more interest in the product,” Aronson said. “Students gave me lots of great feedback and I was able to cull all their ideas to come up with my final product. Fortunately, I had already generated interest among our campus.” In summer 2014, Aronson partnered with a brand management company, Mitre Agency, that helps start-ups create a new brand. He worked with them to create a company name, logo, and website, and then found vendors for the T-shirts and neckties. With everything in place, North by South Apparel officially launched its online store in November 2014. “We timed the launch to coincide with Georgetown University’s homecoming and focused on campus pre-promotion by giving away free shirts,” Aronson added.

ronson recruited past GDS classmates to wear his shirts and spread the word around other college campuses. He put his sister, Jamie Aronson, a current sophomore at GDS, in charge of the company’s Twitter and Instagram pages. He will soon start a more formal marketing campaign with Mitre Agency to reach an even bigger audience.

“Having my GDS network as a resource has been an important part of my marketing so far,” Aronson said. “We will continue to work with former classmates who’ve been helping to spread the word at their college campuses even as we move to a more formal marketing campaign.”

“Between that base of people from GDS helping me and the fact that GDS gave me such a great foundation of how to take ownership in my work, I was able to build on that in college and translate it into operating my own business,” Aronson said.

Aronson said he’s not sure what will come of this business venture and he is just taking it year by year.

“At the heart of it, my goal was to create a brand that gives people a chance to express their individual style and have fun dressing up while dressing down,” he said.

THE CHARLES McLENDON
Founders Society

The Charles McLendon Founders Society recognizes those individuals who have made provisions for GDS in their estate plans. Such provisions may take the form of a bequest, the designation of GDS as a beneficiary of a life insurance policy, the establishment of a charitable trust with GDS as the beneficiary, the assignment of a title to a primary residence or other planned gift arrangement. Gifts are designated or restricted according to the donor’s wishes. Most often, donors choose to direct planned estate gifts to the School’s permanent endowment, or to provide their own named endowment fund for a specific purpose.

Membership in the McLendon Society is a special distinction, signaling the donor’s understanding that the future of the Day School is a priority now in planning for the ultimate gift upon their death. It is a lifelong commitment to the School’s future welfare. Because of the great variety of gift vehicles and giving opportunities available, donors can make a very personal statement about their care and concern for the children who attend the school.

For more information about planning a gift to Greensboro Day School, visit www.greensboroday.org/plannedgiving, or contact Anne Hurd, Director of Advancement, 336-288-8590, ext. 235.

William Nutt has created a new media project born out of a unique experience at GDS. He recently rolled out the first phase of a new project inspired in part by a unique experience he was afforded as a senior at GDS, when the administration allowed him to explore his interest in web design and development by formally teaching a class. He had 11 students, and it was undoubtedly the most distinguishably beneficial experience of his 13 years at GDS. Briefing (getbriefing.com) was born from the opportunity and is an extraordinarily minimalistic approach to the daily news—a solution to an inadequately addressed demand for balance, relevance and simplicity in an increasingly complex media landscape. In addition, having had the pleasure of creating wedding websites for numerous friends, he decided to formalize the gig and streamline the process. Any brides-to-be who might enjoy a painless and prettier alternative to the clunky DIY options, check out hitch.digital.

Shirley McCreedy may have been renowned for her teaching of Middle School U. S. History for 28 years, but she has made herself at home all over the world. It began, she says, when her husband Bruce, a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, was posted to a small village north of Frankfort, Germany their first two years of marriage. Being open to many different experiences, they have since then visited all of the countries in the United Kingdom and Scandinavia as well as Russia, France, Italy, the Netherlands, the Greek Isles, Turkey, and Egypt. This August they will cruise through the fjords of Norway – a first for them. A day in Oslo will give them an opportunity to enjoy the magnificent Vigelund Sculpture Gardens while there.

She and Bruce are also active gardeners. The home they built and have lived in for 40 years is surrounded by beautiful flowers and herbs. She has just recently repainted a charming fountain in the backyard. They have over time become environmentalists of sorts. She feels that preservation of land, water, and air will definitely be our legacy. “If we don’t preserve the earth,” she avows, “nothing else will matter.”

Although Shirley stays very busy and feels that time goes by so fast, she appreciates the slower pace of retirement than the always feeling rushed life of teaching. She has continued to stay connected, however, to her teacher self through tutoring with the Friendly Avenue Baptist Church Tutoring Ministry, where she stays in touch with another GDS Middle School retiree Marilyn Jones.

Have been a member of Holy Trinity Episcopal for 40 years, she has given countless hours to the church by volunteering in many different ways. Currently she serves on the Board for Friendship Day, a joint community project with First Presbyterian Church for senior citizens, who meet every Thursday morning and have lunch together. The two churches also have very productive community gardens.

When asked what else she felt was important to put into her profile, she said that every year in every class she told her students, “If you grow up and fail to vote, you can consider that you have failed this class.” She believes strongly that students today do not get enough American history and that we abdicate our responsibility as citizens if we don’t keep up with what is going on in our own country and around the world and vote.

On a gentler note, Shirley concluded by saying that she doesn’t do anything exciting, but “one good thing about retirement is that you do really do slow down enough to smell the flowers.”
